Risālah al-Nikāh
(Booklet of Marriage Contract)

“... He created for you from yourselves wives that you may find repose in them; and
He placed between you affection and mercy.”

(Sūrah al-Rūm, Āyah 21)

BISMILLĀHIR-RAHMĀNIR-RAHĪM

Preface

Hamd (praise and thanks) be to Allāh Ta'ālā who made Nikāh (marriage) Halāl and Zinā (adultery) Harām and who created us from a drop of water. Peace and salutations be upon our Prophet Hadrat Muhammad Mustafa (sallallāhu alayhi wa sallam) who encouraged his ummah (community) to perform Nikāh, who forbade Zinā and prohibited Ruhbāniyyah¹ and on his family and companions. The religious rulings of Nikāh are undoubtedly one of the necessary basics of Islam that each Muslim need to know adequately.

Nikāh is an essential command of the Deen that has been ordained like Īmān since the time of Ādam (alayhis salām) until now, which will also be practised in the Ākhirah. It has been ¹ It is a word used to describe the life of monks who forbid marriage upon themselves and adopt a way of life without marriage.
